Death Takes Mokena Resident

Mrs. Charles Geuther passed away in her home in Mokena Wednesday following a lingering illness. She attained the age of 71 years, 7 months and 2 days.

She was born July 19, 1869 in the township of Frankfort the daughter of Phillip and Elizabeth Bauch.

She was united in marriage with Charles Geuther, April 2, 1892 by the late Rev. C. Schaub, then pastor of the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena.

They resided on a farm and quite a number of years ago located in Mokena where they have since resided.

Surviving are the husband, three daughters, Mrs. Mabel Krapp, Mrs. Lydia Kohl, both of Mokena; Mrs. Olive Stellwagen of Chicago; two sons, Milton and Harold of Mokena; eight grandchildren and one brother J. P. Bauch of Frankfort.

Funeral services will be held this Friday, February 23rd from the late home at 1:30 o'clock to the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena at two o'clock, with the pastor, Rev. Theodore Haeefe officiating.

Burial will be in the St. John cemetery.

Mokena Civic Group Shows Much Activity

The Mokena Civic Association is keeping a number of live issues before the membership and at the monthly meeting Monday night in the church parlors of the Immanuel Lutheran church a report was made by Arthur Shoop in regards to a community four year high school. He stated that County Supt. of Schools Bottino has advised that a district in which such a school could be located would have to have at least a million dollars of assessed valuation. A separate district could be formed to take in adjoining territory in order to get such valuation.

Stokes Nebeker reported wonderful progress was being made in the Boy Scout work, 38 boys now being interested in scout activities from the cub scout on up. The Girl Scouts also are making fine progress.

Orville Werner declared that he felt Mokena should be more publicized as a good place to live and suggested that bill boards be erected at intersections of main highways to the south, north and east of Mokena calling attention to the advantages of living in Mokena. President R. A. Bechstein appointed Mr. Werner, Raymond McGuire and Barney Hostert as a committee to investigate this proposition.

Rev. Walter Geffert pointed out that the Civic Association had made it possible to hear a good speaker on Washington's birthday who gave a fine outline of the political and war conditions in Europe. Rev. Mr. Geffert declared other good speakers may be procured in the near future. The matter of providing free serum inoculation was also taken up and this matter may be carried out at a future date.

At the close of the meeting beautiful technicolor pictures were shown by E. Shaffer of the Rock Island railroad publicity department showing the beauties of the new streamlined Rock Island Colorado Rocket and the wonders and beauties of Colorado as an ideal vacation land. Other pictures were shown of the Southern Pacific railroad's famous daylight special running from San Francisco to Los Angeles. The pictures were highly interesting and the Association extended a vote of thanks to Mr. Shaffer for the splendid pictures.

President Bechstein said that a number of Chambers of Commerce in various parts of the country have sent inquiries to the local Association relative to the Mokena territory. This, Mr. Bechstein said, is indicative that the Mokena Civic Association is getting on the map.

FIRE DESTROYS HOME OF WIDOW IN ALPINE

Fire of unknown origin broke out in a small frame bungalow occupied by Mrs. Ella Krohn in Alpine about ten o'clock (this) Friday morning. Mrs. Krohn had taken her five children to school earlier in the morning and then went to Mokena, so there was no one at the place when the fire broke out. The dwelling was owned by George Hunter of Chicago who is building another new bungalow near the one destroyed. All the furniture and personal belongings of Mrs. Krohn fell prey to the flames.

Mrs. Krohn is a widow and the loss of her home is a very hard blow to her.

Mrs. Krohn is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Yunker of Mokena.

By the time the fire was first seen by a care taker on the Hunter place and passing motorists on Wolf road and on 159th street the place was beyond saving. There is no water supply of any kind in Alpine and with a strong wind fanning the fire there was no chance of saving the building even had the fire been discovered earlier.

Miss Florence Hauck United In Marriage With Frankfort Man

A simple home wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. August Hauck of Mokena Wednesday evening of this week at six o'clock when their daughter Florence E., was united in marriage with Lester H. Christiansen, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Christiansen of Frankfort.

Rev. Theodore Haeefe, pastor of the St. John Evangelical church of Mokena read the marriage service, the single ring ceremony being used.

The bride was attired in powder blue silk alpaca and wore a corsage of pink roses and blue forget-me-nots. The bride's maid was Miss Viola Christiansen, sister of the groom. She was dressed in dusty rose silk alpaca and wore a corsage bouquet of talisman roses and white frezias. The groom was attended by the bride's brother, Norman Hauck.

Following the ceremony dinner was served, the guests being the immediate members of the families.

A wedding cake decorated with the bride's chosen colors, pink and blue, and centered with a miniature bride and groom graced the center of the table. Pink tapers were at either end.

After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Christiansen will reside on a farm at Frankfort.

Lily Bauch And Roderick Rainford Married In Frankfort

Miss Lily Bauch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Bauch, was married to Mr. Roderick Rainford on Saturday, February 17, at 8 o'clock, in the parsonage of the Methodist church in Frankfort by Rev. Malek.

Mrs. Joseph Clelland, sister of the bride and Robert Rainford, brother of the groom attended the couple. The bride was dressed in a pretty old-rose costume with matching accessories, and wore gardenias.

A reception was given in the Andrew Schroth home to the immediate families. The couple have gone to housekeeping on a farm one mile from Monee. Miss Bauch has been a bookkeeper in the garage of her brother, Arthur, for many years.

Our congratulations to the newlyweds.

Beginners in all instruments are urged to join the new classes now, and former members are invited to return.

Rehearsals are held Tuesday evenings at 7:00 at the school, and at 4:00 p. m. on the same day for the beginners.

Last Tuesday evening after rehearsal a reception was held for Mr. and Mrs. Gierich, attended by the parents and students.

Plainfield Man Shoots Fox

Bad weather last Sunday put a crimp in the Mokena fox hunt, but even at that one fox was shot by Mervin Aul of Plainfield on the Fred Scheel farm west of Mokena.

Spears Fish on Mississippi

John J. Schelling, a former resident of the Mokena territory writes an interesting letter from Little Falls, Minn., saying he has been enjoying the spear-fishing through the ice on the Mississippi river.

In the accompanying picture Mr. Schelling is shown with a mess of fish he speared in below zero weather.

He pays a license fee of $1 for fishing in what is known as a fish house. A hole is cut through the ice about the size of the fish house, which is then moved over the hole. In one corner of the fish house is a stove, and a stool in the other. A wooden decoy minnow is used to attract the fish and when they come to the opening in the ice they are speared instead of being caught with a hook and line. This is said to be an interesting sport.

Mr. Schelling writes that one fisherman caught a 36 1/2 pound muskie about six miles up stream from where he fishes. The muskie, however, was caught by angling.

Mr. Schelling would be pleased to hear from his old friends in Mokena, Frankfort, New Lenox, Tinley Park, and Orland Park. His address is: Route 4, Little Falls, Minn.

Mokena Girl Scout Troop Installed With Impressive Ceremony

The long planned for investiture ceremony of Troop No. 1 of the Mokena Girl Scouts sponsored by the Mokena Civic Association, took place in the Mokena School Auditorium Wednesday evening with a good attendance of parents and friends.

Mrs. Stokes Nebeker, general chairman of the Scouts committee, welcomed the guests with a few appropriate words. The assembly sang "America The Beautiful". This was followed by presentation of the charter of Troop one to their leader Mrs. Albert Cappel by Stokes Nebeker. Mrs. Cappel responded in a most sincere and thoughtful manner.

Mrs. Brethorst and Mrs. Nickelson, leaders of Girl Scout Troops in Joliet, were introduced and they presented twelve of their Scouts and together they put on a demonstration of their work.

The investiture service proper was begun by the troop committee composed of Mesdames Stokes Nebeker, Henry Schevlin, James Egerton and George Reed. Each carried a lighted candelabra which they placed in an area where later the Girl Scouts took their places in the form of a horse shoe, standing shoulder to shoulder, which symbolized friendship. While standing thus they were met at the head of the formation by their leader, Mrs. Albert Cappel, and assistant leader Miss Ada Semmler and scout escort, Katherine Reed. The latter presented each girl to Mrs. Cappel who after the administration of the Scout oath, presented each scout with a pin. Taps concluded this portion of the program.

Four members of the Wm. Martin Post V. F. W. Auxiliary with Wm. Myrick presented the national colors, and escorted Elmer Cooper, Wm. Lowe and James Egerton who presented the flag to the Troop, a gift from the Civic Association. In presenting this flag Robt. A. Bechstein, president of the Mokena Civic Association said:

"Troop No. 1 Girl Scouts of America the honors conferred on you tonight, we deem deservedly bestowed. All of which are your dues for your personal efforts, your submission to discipline and your absorption of instructions. These speak well not only for you yourselves, but also your scout leaders."

"Your scout work and conduct has been so commendable, that we had many favorable comments from both your parents and leaders, that we thought it wise to let the good work go on and tho we were absent from your sessions, this may have lead you to believe that we lacked interest, however any such belief would be erroneous for we are not only interested in you, but proud of your accomplishments for you have fully demonstrated that you are of the caliber upon which rests the future of America."

Joining us tonight as complimentary to you are the Ladies Auxiliary of the Wm. Martin Post of the V F W whose presence is indicative of their interest in the splendid work of your organization. It now therefore becomes my pleasant duty to present to you on behalf of the Mo-

Bite of Coral Snake Brings Swift Death

Louis Rauch of Blue Island, father of Fred Rauch of Mokena, returned this week from a trip to Florida. He brought back quite a number of souvenirs of the trip, the most exciting being a coral snake, the most dangerous poisonous snake known. It's bite will cause death within seven minutes. The specimen Mr. Rauch has is not a live one, but was killed by two native Florida boys. The reptile is 2 feet 6 inches long and has a white streak about an eighth of inch, a red streak 2 inches wide and a black streak 5 inches.

sors, the flag of our country, known as Civic Association, your sponsoring full well as indicated by your past record that you will ever keep its stars bright and its stripes always unsullied."

At the close of the address the program came to an end with the pledge of allegiance lead by Miss Ada Semmler. Those present deeply appreciated the fine spirit of patriotism shown.

U. S. Guards Its Strategic Resources While 'Haves' Fight With 'Have Nots'

By PETER BECK

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON. — When Adolf Hitler initiated his eighth year as Nazi Reichsfuehrer, he asserted, in threatening the Allies with total war, that this was "a social war between nations, in which the have-nots are fighting the haves for a new division of the world." It was an excuse as old as the first caprice of Mother Nature.

For, scattering generous supplies of mineral and vegetable resources in some spots of the earth and leaving others woefully barren, Nature created a world of "haves" and "have-nots" and war has been going on somewhere ever since.

Against daily reports of the pinch European nations are feeling because of blockades, there stands in relief a more encouraging picture for Uncle Sam.

U. S. Pretty Well Off.

America is self-sustaining to a degree nearly equaling the total of "the six other great powers" in the essentials to "a comfortable standard of living," according to Lieut. Col. H. D. Rogers, chief of the commodities division, office of the assistant secretary of war. These essentials, Colonel Rogers writes in Army Ordnance, are: Food, fibers, power, iron and steel, machinery, chemicals, coal and petroleum.

The U. S. has one-third to one-half the world's wealth and does one-half its work, Colonel Rogers says. The average American workman has 13½ horsepower at his command, those of some other countries less than one. For this reason he estimates the American workman to be worth two French or Italian workmen, nearly two Germans, or three and one-half Russians.

Inventive genius and industrial science have cured many of America's material deficiencies and are working to cure what few there remain today. The army commodities division, according to Colonel Rogers, now lists only 17 materials as "strategic," a far smaller number than that listed by other nations. These are manganese ore, tin, chrome ore, tungsten, antimony, manila fiber, nickel, quartz crystal, quinine, rubber, silk, mica, mercury, aluminum, coconut-shell char, optical glass and wool.

Plenty of Aluminum.

Not all of these are cause for general alarm. Aluminum, for instance, is perhaps the least "strategic" of all. Maj. G. A. Roush, writing in Military Engineer, states that there is no question of the ability of the reserves to meet even emergency demands.

Some geologists have estimated that a considerable supply of high grade bauxite (ore of aluminum) is still available here as a result of the long-established policy of Aluminum Company of America to conserve its Arkansas deposits for times of emergency. Although the U. S. was completely self-sufficient in bauxite during the World War, the richer Arkansas supplies were heavily drawn upon, causing the company to begin importing increasing amounts, until today more than 60 per cent of its bauxite comes from Dutch Guiana, leaving literally millions of tons of varying grade in Arkansas. However, in any great emergency, no great difficulty is anticipated in policing the ship lane from Dutch Guiana, especially since any American defense program must include defense of the Panama canal.

Manganese Safeguarded.

Even in the case of manganese, which authorities have labeled strategic material No. 1, developments

OUR position in agriculture requires a smaller percentage of our population than other nations, leaving the bulk of our workers free to engage in industry.

of the last few years have greatly reduced the possible danger of loss of supplies. While it is true that domestic production from the low grade ores which are available in 38 states is not being undertaken on anything like a scale equal to the demands of the American steel industry, the Cuban-American Manganese corporation, an American-financed company, has perfected a flotation process for concentrating Cuban ores, which are similar to many of the American low grade ores.

Most authorities feel that shipments of rubber from the Far East are likely to be regular under almost any conditions that can be visualized at this time. Meanwhile, S. L. Brous, a qualified engineer of the B. F. Goodrich company, writing in India Rubber World, recently stated that with the expenditure of $30,000,000 on a high-speed research program to develop synthetic rubbers the United States could in one year be made independent of foreign supplies of natural rubber.

Nation Makes Optical Glass. Lamot du Pont, president of E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company, says that, thanks to American scientists, this country is now producing optical glass second to none, whereas in 1914 we were dependent upon Europe for this vital material needed in the manufacture of various instruments. Science has made us independent today in materials which were strategic in the past, he points out: We now take nitrates from the air; recover potash from our own deposits; make our own dyes through organic chemistry, and produce our own camphor synthetically.

No one can tell how soon other materials will be removed from the strategic list by science. The Texas Mining and Smelting company now has a plant at Laredo, Texas, designed to make more effective use of antimonial ores from nearby Mexico. Constant experiments are being conducted to improve the nation's output of mercury, tungsten and other materials.

One reason for the optimistic belief that science will find ways of supplying our deficiencies in strategic materials is that progress of American civilization makes demands entirely apart from the requirements of defense. To quote Colonel Rogers again, "It is practically impossible to name a raw material which has a strictly military use, and the same can be said of many manufactured articles."

Great Men in Exile: Ex-Polish Leaders Claimed by Oblivion

PARIS.—While Poland's government-in-exile continues its ghost-like existence here, the triumvirate which a few months ago led the Warsaw government has become forgotten in obscurity.

Marshal Edward Smigly-Ridz, the bald-headed, artistic commander-in-chief now lives in isolation on an estate in northern Rumania recalling bitterly how his army of 2,000,000 men collapsed overnight before the Nazi onslaught. Smigly-Ridz has been charged with fleeing Poland while his troops still fought, a rumor which the Germans used to advantage in stamping out the last phases of Polish resistance.

Most of his time the marshal spends walking aimlessly about his palace grounds, finding no comfort even in painting—for he is an artist in his own right.

Josef Beck, the dynamic little foreign minister of Poland—that was, lives in a swank tuberculosis sanitarium in central Rumania. Less than a year ago the world rocked when he defied Chancellor Hitler; today Beck is an unknown. When his government was forced to flee Poland, Beck rushed to Cernauti, Rumania, and announced its reorganization there. But Rumania quickly put a stop to this violation of its neutrality, and Josef Beck became another private citizen.

Likewise, former President Ignace Moscicki, a kindly, studious old man who left Poland immediately after the war began. He resigned shortly after the Nazi conquest to facilitate reorganization of Poland-in-exile at Paris. Ailing, he took treatments in Rumania and was finally permitted to join his wife in Switzerland, where he lives in complete retirement.

Scattered, likewise, are the 304 members of Poland's parliament who cheered Josef Beck's speech last May.

St. Lawrence seaway treaty still faces almost solid opposition in the senate... Elimination of tax-exempt bonds won't open up a great new source of revenue... Not beef, but linseed oil, it was that killed the trade agreement with Argentina.

WASHINGTON. — The obvious fact, to any newspaper man conscientiously canvassing the senate, that no treaty providing for a St. Lawrence seaway can possibly win the two-thirds majority necessary to ratification, creates continued speculation among those familiar with the senate situation as to why President Roosevelt is pushing negotiations looking to such a treaty now.

The President was asked forthright and avoided an answer. Replying to an inquiry by Mrs. Elizabeth May Craig, who represents a string of newspapers in Maine, the President first thought it was a left-handed effort to gain some light as to his plans for a third term. Then he assumed that Mrs. Craig wanted to know why he had not started the fight sooner.

What most of the correspondents, not to mention nearly all the senators, would like to know is why he is pushing a fight which he must know will wind up—if it ever reaches the senate at all—in a crushing defeat.

Last time, in March, 1934, the treaty had just three favorable votes from Atlantic coast states. These were those of Senators Ellison D. Smith and James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, and Senator Fred H. Brown of New Hampshire. Brown was defeated in 1933 by Senator Charles W. Tobey, a Republican, who is far more interested in what might happen to Portsmouth by traffic being diverted to the St. Lawrence than in the power plans of the President.

In 1934, when that other vote was had, Senator Byrnes was regarded as one of the closest men personally to the President in the entire senate. This is still true. But his colleague, Cotton Ed Smith, was one of those whom the President tried to purge.

Grain Producers Exert Pressure in Northwest

There has not been a President elected since the St. Lawrence seaway idea began to appeal to the Northwest who has not announced during his campaign that he favored it. The first pressure came from the grain producers who were promised that the seaway would save them a substantial freight charge on shipments to Liverpool, the world's wheat market.

No one ever claimed seriously that the seaway was economically sound—that it would be able to charge enough tolls on shipping, plus the production of electricity, to pay for itself. That is, no economist or cost accounting expert ever did. But it was not necessary to prove anything to farmers except an obvious advance in wheat prices if the cost of moving the wheat to Liverpool could be cut.

This argument can still be made, though the fact is that the seaway is further from being economically sound today than ever, due to the heavy falling off in grain exports. On the other hand, a curious fear of another of the seaway's effects has grown up in the very section of the country which a few years ago was so strong for it. This is fear of manufacturers in the Great Lakes territory that the seaway would bring cheap European competition right to their doors. This, of course, is not worrying the farmers.

But whatever the Northwest may want, the Atlantic coast senators are not going to vote for the St. Lawrence seaway.

Dropping Tax-Exempt Bonds Won't Open Up Great Revenue

Against the New Deal objective of eliminating tax-exempt bonds there is very little that can be said. Every President for many years has wished that it could be done, but until Franklin D. Roosevelt, all have thought it impossible.

It still looks pretty tough, but high New Dealers, including the President and Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, are insisting now that it will be accomplished.

But its accomplishment will by no means achieve the results which are generally claimed in political speeches. It will not, for instance, open up the tremendous new source of revenue, both for the federal government and the states and cities, that most speakers claim. Most of the difference after tax exempts have passed into history will be a bookkeeping change rather than a real increase in revenue.

For example, a man now holds $100,000 of City of Baltimore three per cent bonds, for which he paid something in excess of par, so that he is actually getting a return of about 2½ per cent on his money. He does not have to pay any federal income tax on this annual income from the bonds, and he does not have to pay any local tax to the state of Maryland.

Let's imagine that those bonds, under the new dispensation, are no longer tax-exempt. In order to market them, the city would have to sell them on at least a 4 per cent basis. The man's income would jump up, on paper, and he would pay just about the difference between his new income and his old income in additional taxes.

Based on Value to Investor Of the Tax-Exempt Element

This is true—on the average—because the price at which tax-exempt bonds can be sold, or more accurately the interest return on money put into tax-exempt bonds, is figured absolutely on the value to the investor of this tax-exempt element.

So both the federal government and states or smaller taxing units would have to pay higher interest rates on their borrowings, and then would collect the money back in higher tax returns, on the average making very little difference.

Why then all the opposition to outlawing tax exempts?

For the simple reason contained in that word "average." In the first place, individual states, cities and counties think they get the best of the deal as compared with the federal government. They think that men and women with very large incomes buy their securities in order to dodge the top brackets of federal income taxes. And they are right. They do not worry about their own resulting tax losses because they see only the big investment in their local bonds by rich men and women in cities outside their own taxing power. They do not see tabulations of their own residents who own federal bonds, partly to escape federal taxation, but also local taxation.

Not Beef, Linseed Oil.

Killed Argentine Trade Pact

The actual rock on which the recent negotiations between the United States and the Argentine republic split was not beef, canned or otherwise, as commonly supposed, but linseed oil. When the U. S. negotiators made it clear that they would not cut the tariff on linseed oil in half if under the new rate Argentina could export all the linseed oil she could sell to this country, but would insist on a quota, the Argentines threw up their hands. There has been not even a hint since of reopening the discussion for a reciprocal trade agreement.

In fact, it began to look as though, regardless of what action congress may take about extending the power of the President to make these agreements, the program has about bogged down. This is far from meaning that it has failed so far as the hopes of its friends are concerned. Actually much more progress has been made than the most optimistic of Cordell Hull's lieutenants dreamed when the first negotiations started.

Cordell Hull

It must be remembered that the tremendous list of agreements now in effect will run on until their various expiration dates whether congress renews the power to make new agreements or not.

Nevertheless, there is no doubt that it is the present fight on the treaties in Capitol Hill which has tied the hands of the state department in making new agreements.

Copper Producing States Ganged on State Department

It will be remembered that senators from all the copper producing states ganged up on the state department when they heard that the duty on copper might be cut in half by the agreement under negotiation at the time with Chile. So formidable was this opposition that Secretary Hull promptly announced that copper would not be included.

This was certain to stir up activity on the part of other interests which might be frightened by pending reciprocal trade agreements. The prompt development concerned linseed oil, which is crushed from flax seed.

Now the amazing part of this linseed oil story is that flax is not an important agricultural product in this country. We actually import linseed oil in quantities, always have, and, so far as one may judge the future, always will. During the depth of the farm depression the department of agriculture called attention to the farmers of the country to the fact that there was an overproduction of every single farm product in this country except flax.

Nevertheless, there has been no great turning of our farmers to the production of flax. Which is curious because representatives from the few states which produce flax were able to get the duty on linseed oil boosted in the last tariff bill. Yet there has been no important increase in the acres put into flax as a result of this greater measure of protection.

The same political forces which forced the tariff boost have now been able to scare the state department into refusing to consider letting the Argentines sell us more linseed oil!

Beauty Treatment For an Old Chair

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

HERE is proof of what a beauty treatment and a new costume will do for an out-of-date chair. Its new dress is very chic. The material is a soft old red cotton crash with seam cordings and binding for the scalloped skirt in dove gray.

An inch was cut from the back legs to tilt the chair for greater comfort. The carving at the top and the upholstery on the back and arms were left in place, but the lines of the chair were completely changed by padding with cotton batting. Unbleached muslin was then stretched over the padding to make all perfectly smooth. Soft rags or excelsior may be used for filling under the cotton if desired.

Railroads to Adopt Automobile To Combat—Yes, Automobile!

CHICAGO.—American railroads, having watched painfully while the automobile sliced a big percentage from their total passenger revenues, have decided to fight this competition with—of all things—automobiles. And the traveling public, which sees merit in both the railroad and auto, nods approvingly.

Effective May 1, a new train-auto service will be inaugurated by 11 leading western railroads in 150 key cities. It works this way:

Vacationists bound for a distant destination can leave the car at home, riding comfortably by train to a key point within easy driving distance. There they can rent a modern five-passenger sedan at a nominal rate, galavant around the surrounding country as much as they like, and return home again by train.

Hugh W. Siddall, rail executive in charge of the plan, calls it "the railroads' answer to the prayer of the traveler who likes the mobility of an automobile at certain points, but dislikes driving long intermediate distances."

The train-auto combination is expected to be especially popular with traveling salesmen, who can make advance reservations, be met at the train by a representative with the car, and complete their business in a fully insured and maintained vehicle.

Executives point to the time saving features, maintaining that long-distance travelers can complete the long part of their trip more quickly and comfortably than by automobile.

The system was evolved by an organization headed by Edward O'Shea and R. H. Rogers of Lincoln, Neb., pioneer automobile operators. Negotiations still are under way with other western roads and it is expected that eventually the auto service will be available in practically every town of 10,000 population or more throughout the West and South.

The cars will look exactly like privately owned autos and will be replaced with new models each year. Five passenger sedans were chosen because they offered maximum carrying capacity for passengers and luggage.

BY TALBOT MUNDY

TALBOT MUNDY—WNU SERVICE

SYNOPSIS

Captain Carl Norwood has been sent from his native England to the Kadur River district in India, along with his indispensable manservant, Moses O'Leary, soldier of fortune. Norwood's job is to survey the district to determine whether a valuable secret diamond mine belongs to the temple priests or to the ruler, the Maharajah of Kadur.

Noor Mahlam chuckled. It was like the gurgle of dirty water and it swallowed the silk of his voice. Even his gesture changed. He became as hoarse as an auctioneer encouraging a doubtful bidder:

"Sahib, there is newness at the palace such as never before was! There is a godsend in the guest-house. She has money, and a niece worth more than money. Oh, such loveliness! And oh, such ill temper! The aunt is never satisfied unless she is humiliating someone. She humiliates even His Highness. And the niece is never happy unless she can be as kind as her aunt is cruel."

"Why are they there?" asked O'Leary.

"It is a mystery. Nobody knows."

"Who wants to know?"

"Ah, sahib, you must not ask what I may not tell you."

"I'll bet a month's pay," said O'Leary, "that the temple Brahmins have sent out a call for information."

"Would it make any difference to you, Mr. O'Leary, where the two hundred rupees came from, supposing you had it?"

"Two fifty might tempt me. I'd think it over."

"Even that price might not be too high for exact information as to why Captain Norwood is in Kadur; and also why Mrs. Harding and Miss Lynn Harding are here at the same time. There is some connection. What is it?"

"I'll find out," said O'Leary.

"And you will sell me the information?"

"I'll think it over. If I can't find a higher bidder, maybe you and I can do business. You'd better watch out for me. I'll take a stroll through the bazaar later on."

"Very well, Mr. O'Leary. My office is—"

"What do I care where your office is. D'you think I'd let myself be seen calling on you? You keep a dekho lifting. You've plenty o' spies. Find out where I go, and follow, and bring your money with you. Three hundred."

"But sahib, we agreed to—"

"I said three hundred. You'd better go before I'm seen talking to you. Captain Norwood might be back any minute. If he should ask me who you are I'd have to tell him, and it wouldn't sound nice. Him and me never lie to each other."

CHAPTER II

Captain Carl Norwood was in nothing yet that he or anyone could recognize as trouble. On horseback, followed by a mounted native orderly, he was entering the ancient gate of Kadur City. A good-looking fellow, young to be a Captain of Royal Engineers. He looked more like a cavalryman. Inside the city gates, there was a stinking herd of loaded camels. They blocked the street. Norwood's horse that wasn't used to camels went into a panic. When he had calmed the horse he dismounted, gave the reins to the orderly, and told him to let the horse get used to the smell of camels and follow as soon as the camels were out of the way. He wanted to stretch his legs anyhow. It was only a mile walk to the Residency, on the far side of the city. The swarming streets were interesting, just before sunset, with the night life just beginning.

The Residency stood in a vast compound amid neem trees. Guard-house—flagpole—Union Jack. The Residency guard of native Indian infantry was turning out to pay the customary honors to the flag at sunset. The Resident was on the front steps, middle-aged and military looking. Norwood had to wait until the brief ceremony was over. His reception was not cordial. The invitation to dinner was perfunctory, so phrased that it was easy to refuse.

"I'm tired, sir. Long march. I would like to turn in early."

"Very well, Captain Norwood. Don't let me inconvenience you. I was informed, of course, that you were coming. Can't say that I approve of this survey of the Kadur River. The priests will resent it bitterly. There may be trouble enough as it is over the temple boundary dispute. The Maharajah claims ownership of certain buildings, beneath which it has been an open secret for centuries that the priests have a diamond mine."

"That's why I'm here, sir. I was told that Prince Rundhia started the argument."

"Yes, he's heir to the throne. He had to start it in the Maharajah's name, but it was Rundhia's idea

The Maharajah is a quiet old gentleman, thank heaven. No initiative. Satisfied to let things take their course. I believe the quarrel would settle itself, if we would let it alone. The diamond mine is one of those open secrets that do no harm until they're aired by busybodies. The arrangement has worked perfectly well all these years. The priests don't win many diamonds from the mine. Sometimes years go by without their finding any stones worth putting on the market. But they make an occasional find. They turn over a certain percentage to the Maharajah, and sell the remainder for temple revenue.

"Yes. There's a rumor the mine is dangerous."

"Good God, man! They don't let anyone near the mine—not even the Maharajah!"

"Provision has been made for that, sir."

The Resident squirmed. "Well, take care that your—" he selected a word; he used it tartly: "—spies don't make trouble."

Norwood returned to the city. The new street lights had been turned on. There was a swarm of homing traffic—bullock carts, camels, droves of pedestrians, scandalously noisy and decrepit autos. Norwood stood on a sort of traffic island in mid-street—an oasis of palms with an ancient fountain and one big glaring arc-light. He could see the orderly bringing the horses; he might just as well wait for them.

Threading its way through the traffic in the direction of the palace, there came one of those old-fashioned carriages in which zenana ladies take the air. It was magnificently horsed. Two mounted men rode ahead to clear the way, and they were followed by two runners armed with sticks. Two men in splendid livery on the box. Two footmen on a platform behind the carriage. Two more horsemen bringing up the rear.

As the carriage drew near Norwood, a terrifically noisy truck frightened the horses. Almost at the same moment, two elephants loomed into view from a side street. The horses plunged. The driver had hard work to control them. The carriage swayed violently. The right front wheel struck the curb, close to Norwood. The shock jerked open the door. The electric arc-light shone in, revealing the occupants. The coachman reined the horses to a standstill, shouting to the footmen to seize their needs.

Diamonds, pearls, zephyr silken saris of the hue of Himalayan dawn. Two women. The older, stout one raised a fan to hide her face. It was the other who held Norwood spellbound.

She was young. She was full of laughter. She had mocking, excitable, generous eyes that looked wild to lose their innocence and revel in what shouldn't be, but is, and is amusing. She saw no evil, only humor in being stared at by a man who shouldn't see her, and hadn't expected to. Indian zenana ladies are supposed to shrink from men's eyes. Hers met Norwood's full, and full of laughter.

Norwood, of course, recovered self-possession. He was in uniform, so he saluted. He was about to speak; he had thought of a properly gallant remark that would sound almost like a quotation from the "Arabian Nights," when the palace servants took the situation in hand.

The driver recovered command of his horses. The carriage moved on. The footmen jumped up behind. Norwood was left wondering. He had had a vision. He had never seen such a beautiful girl.

The older, stouter woman, who had used the fan to hide her face, should be the Maharane of Kadur. But Norwood knew she was childless; otherwise Prince Rundhia, the Maharajah's nephew, would not be heir to the throne. The ladies of Kadur have black, not golden hair.

so the younger girl could hardly be a relative. She might be a princess on a visit from some northern Indian State.

The orderly, selected because he was a native of Kadur, rode up with the led horse.

"Has Prince Rundhia taken a wife?" Norwood asked him.

"No, sahib. One does not discuss zenana ladies—not with men of an alien race. The orderly grinned himself into the kind of silence that suggests the subject is forbidden."

Norwood rode back to his camp, where Moses Lafayette O'Leary lied, like three men of three different races, about who had drunk the whiskey.

"It was an emergency," said O'Leary. "Yes, sir, I took the liberty. But how can I get information if I mayn't count on your knowledge o' my honesty, and take a chance now and then on your overlooking what would be impudence if someone else should do it? I have to treat my informants decent. Have you heard who's staying at the palace? There's a guesthouse in the garden full o' women. Americans. Two. A young one. And an aunt who'd fill a hotel. Truck-loads o' luggage. I've heard say the aunt could make a brace of tigers wish they'd looked the other way. They say she's a holy terror. But they tell me the young one 'ud melt your heart to look at her. They call the young one Miss Lynn Harding."

"What else have you found out?"

"Not much."

"You're about due for an Irish promotion. You're getting too fat. I've my eye on a man who knows what work is."

"All right, sir. If you want me to talk before I know what I'm talking about, I'll do it. Here goes. The whole bazaar's as full o' dirty rumors as Stoddard's dog is o' fleas. There's a game on, and it's all set. They're laying for us, and the way they figure it we're in the bag already. I've been offered a bribe to tell why you're in Kadur."

"Cash?"

"No. Promises. Man name o' Noor Mahlam."

"Beyond that you were offered a bribe, did you get any other line on their intentions?"

"No. I know we're being spied on. There's a saying in Kadur that diamonds see in the dark. We're being watched now. We can't afford a mistake. But they'll try some more bribery first before they act ugly."

"Don't take their money. Don't take a gift of any kind from anyone."

"Me?"

"Yes. You."

"I'm incorruptible."

CHAPTER III

Mrs. Deborah Harding, in leggings, a short skirt, and a wide pith helmet, wearing goggles, and with a camera suspended somehow from her portly figure, prodded ruins with the ferrule of a green silk sunshade. Two palace servants danced attendance on her, doing their obsequious utmost to prevent calamity.

"Sahiba! Not good! Much too many cobra—kerait—scorpions—too bad. Come, look this way. Plenty ruins this way."

But Mrs. Deborah Harding wasn't in the habit of taking the advice of anyone less than a Supreme Court Justice; nor would she hesitate to question that if it didn't agree with her own convictions. She was dynamic, opulent, willful dignity personified. As honorary special correspondent to The Woman Citizen, of Aaronville, Clarendon County, Ohio, she was being an authority on ruins. She looked like authority. She had authoritative gestures, and a notebook.

It was close on sunset. Mrs. Deborah Harding's goggles were dusty.

Old Fort Laramie Proclaimed National Monument

Old Fort Laramie, in Wyoming, army general headquarters during the Indian wars on the plains and long-time capital of the wilderness west of the Missouri river, has been proclaimed a national monument. The score of crumbling buildings that still mark its site at the junction of the Laramie and North Platte rivers are to be preserved and restored as a memorial to the dauntless traders and soldiers who maintained this greatest of all refuges along the covered-wagon trail by means of which the West was won.

The first known white men to visit the site were members of the Stuart party of the Astorians in the winter of 1812-13. Later it was a fur-trading post. In 1849 the United States army purchased Fort Laramie in order to establish authority over the streams of emigrants who were passing through the fort en route to California. By 1865 the Indian situation became so troublesome that Fort Laramie was made general headquarters of "the military district of the plains."

When the arteries of transconti-ental commerce shifted to the south and the Indians were subdued and either confined to reservations or transported to other parts of the country, Fort Laramie languished, and in 1886 its abandonment was recommended. The last troops marched out of the old fort in 1889 and the military reservation was restored to the public domain the following year.

Although half a century has passed since the Stars and Stripes waved over the historic old fort, since which time the place has been in the hands of various private owners, many of the stout old buildings still stand, including a part of original Fort John and "Bedlam," the bachelor officers' quarters erected in 1852.

Together with Scotts Bluff National monument, located 60 miles to the east, Fort Laramie preserves two of the most famous landmarks on the Oregon trail, the Mormon trail, the Overland trail, the route of the Pony Express, the Overland stage and the first transcontinental telegraph line.

The blood-red sunrays confused her vision. She was one of those people who always believe what they see but nothing that they don't see. She saw a cobra. She did not see that the stone, on which she set her foot, was loose, curved on its under side and resting insecurely on a flat rock. So she twisted her ankle and sat down—hard. It jolted every bone in her corpulent body.

Two hundred and eight pounds of widow with bankers' references and one hundred per cent opinions, can sit down harder than a crate of groceries.

"I never saw such people—such a country. I have travelled all around the world from America. I have visited numbers of countries. I have not seen your equals anywhere for inefficiency and lack of human intelligence. What shall I do now? I am in pain. Have you no ideas? Can't you suggest something?"

One of them mounted the pony and cantered away for assistance. Mrs. Deborah Harding sat fanning herself and making impotently harsh remarks about the swarms of flies that were looking for a last, lazy meal before going to sleep.

The cantering servant drew rein at an outlying police kana and, after a heatedly uncompromising debate with the policeman in charge, phoned the palace. The Maharajah was out. It entered no one's head to consult the Maharajah; it was his hour of the day to study postage stamps, so he was incommunicado, except to the physician who should bring him his evening tonic. However, Prince Rundhia had returned that afternoon, from a visit to Delhi. Someone phoned him. Things happened.

There are two palaces. Rundhia's is separated from the Maharajah's only by a high wall and two widths of glorious garden. Rundhia's imported patent automatic garage-door swung open. His imported ex-Czarist chauffeur whirled a Rolls-Royce to the front door. Rundhia took the wheel. They opened the front gate just in time. Another split second and he would have crashed it, sacked the lot of them, and bumbled a new car from his aunt.

There was a whirl of dust, a din of tooting. Headlights flooded the narrow roads with blinding glare. Three dogs and some belated chickens died the death. Three villages gasped and called on thirty gods to witness their piety. Rundhia rammed on the brakes and got out of the car to bow to Mrs. Harding just as calmly, as blandly, as amusedly courteous as if he were entering her drawing room.

"Well, I am glad to see you," said Mrs. Deborah Harding. "I don't know who you are, but—"

"Prince Rundhia, your host's nephew."

"How d'you do. You took your own time, didn't you? I had begun to think no one was coming."

The garden guesthouse was a copy of a cottage at Juan les Pins. It had been Rundhia's idea. The Prince had persuaded his aunt the Maharane to go thoroughly modern for once.

The Maharane almost worshiped Rundhia, but she had compelled him to return from Europe by cutting off the supplies of cash. She wanted him to learn to be fit for the throne. But Rundhia was always threatening to go to Europe again unless she made things tolerable: so she had to make good his gambling losses and to humor his whims.

No one had stayed at the guesthouse until Mrs. Deborah Harding heard about it during her tour of India. She knew exactly how to contrive invitations. She considered she conferred a favor on the rules of Kadur by accepting their hospitality for herself and her niece.

STEWARDS IN THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 25:14-27.
GOLDEN TEXT—Well done, thou good and faithful servant.—Matthew 25:21.

Christ is coming again! This is the message of Matthew 24 and 25, which is the background for the lesson of today. Here we also learn of the end of the age. To many it seems that the time cannot be long before that great and fateful day breaks upon this chaos which we call civilization. These two chapters contain much important prophetic truth, but in studying our lesson we must limit ourselves to the one fact that when Christ does come again we shall be called to give an account of our stewardship.

Men are prone to think of their life as something accidental. They are here and they seem to have certain abilities and opportunities which they may make use of or not as they choose, and then when the time comes, they expect to leave this world, in which they have sought primarily for pleasure and ease, and go out into eternity without any special responsibility. That theory of life was undoubtedly prepared by the devil and is promoted by him for the purpose of destroying the souls of men.

I. Christ Makes Men Stewards of His Goods (vv. 14-18).

All men are stewards, for it is evident that our Lord has given to each one of us ability and opportunity to serve Him. The unbeliever who entirely rejects or ignores His responsibility before God will have to answer for His failure to follow and serve Christ. So will the professing Christian who denies his profession by his works have to answer for his hypocrisy. Every true Christian likewise must stand before the judgment seat of Christ and be judged for the work he has done in the flesh.

The Lord has committed to each man responsibility according to his ability. God is not unreasonable. He does not demand that which is beyond our capacity. He gives to each one the amount of His goods which that man is able to make use of, and then it becomes his responsibility to use those goods diligently and faithfully.

II. Christ Will Return for a Stewardship Accounting (v. 19).

Life is far from a meaningless existence without responsibility and ultimate accountability. Christ is coming again, we know not when, but we know that He is coming and that He may come today. What answer will you and I give Him when He asks us to account for the goods He has left in our care?

Well aware are we that there are those who scoff at the thought of Christ's return. The Bible told centuries in advance that we should expect such an attitude of unbelief, and it also told why men scoff at this truth, namely, because they are "walking after their own lusts" and are "willingly ignorant" of God's Word (see II Peter 3:3-9).

What a solemn indictment that is! Let us see that it does not apply to us. Let us rather be among those who are "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ" (Titus 2:13). In preparation for that day let us obey His admonition, "Occupy till I come" (Luke 19:13), that we may not stand ashamed in His presence in that day.

III. Faithfulness Brings Reward, Unfaithfulness Results in Judgment (vv. 20-27).

The man who because of special ability had received five talents had a great opportunity to serve his lord, and he did so with courage and fidelity. So also did the man who because of lesser natural endowments received two talents. Both made the most of their opportunities and were equally faithful, and also received equal rewards. We shall not be judged on the basis of the greatness or the limitation of our opportunities, but rather by the use we make of them. That fact should encourage the one who is by circumstance or calling confined to a limited field, while it should solemnize and stir to greater faithfulness the one who has been given great opportunity. Observe that the reward for doing one's work well is not retirement and a pension, but more work (v. 21).

What about the man with the one talent? Apparently he yielded to the ever-present temptation to be hurt because he did not receive as much as the others (vv. 24-26). Instead of appreciating the kindness of his lord in not burdening him with more goods than he was able to care for, and doing what he could with what he had, he hid the talent in the ground and went about his own business. Such rebellion and carelessness naturally brought forth the reproof of the master and judgment (see vv. 29, 30).

As You Reap

"Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. He that soweth sparingly shall also reap sparingly."

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Tarnished egg spoons can be quickly cleaned by washing with a rag dipped in salt.

Carving lamb roasts is much easier if they have been boned and tied before cooking.

Save soap scraps, all of them. Put into a pan and cover with cold water; simmer until every bit is melted and the liquid is clear. Put in a jar and keep near sink. It will set into a jelly.

Threading curtains on to their rods again after washing is difficult—and if they are thin the blunt end of the rod may tear them. Avoid this by fitting a smooth thimble over the end of the rod before threading.

French fried potatoes will be more crisp if allowed to stand in cold water for half an hour before frying.

Kitchens should be cheerful and comfortable as well as convenient. A high stool is an aid to comfort in preparing vegetables or mixing ingredients. An attractive corner where the homemaker can sit and read over a new recipe, make out her order list of groceries or wait for a dish to finish cooking adds considerably to a comfortable kitchen.

ACHING CHEST COLDS

Boy Scouts, Tinley Park, Troop 53 Last Friday evening in the PTA room the Tinley Park Boy Scouts, troop 53, held their regular meeting. They are meeting here while the new Methodist church, the sponsoring institution, is under construction. Although they are without a Scout master at the present time, Mr. Johnson, chairman of the scout committee along with the cooperation of the boys, are carrying on and so far have had some rather good meetings. A plan is under way to give the boys a social time at least once a month after the regular meeting has been adjourned. Last month it was weenies, rolls, and cocoa. This month they had ice cream and cake. The boys would like to thank Mrs. Bonn and Mrs. Anderson for the nice cakes. Two of the scout fathers were there as visitors. The troop has been having a regular attendance of from ten to thirteen boys and it is their hope to enroll more to carry on the boy scout movement in Tinley Park.

Any boy that is interested is asked to get in touch with John Rinsick, assistant Scout Master, Mr. Johnson, the scout chairman, or Rev. Weinrich.

Last evening, February 22, a group of interested mothers and fathers of our Scouts attended the Boy Scout Appreciation pot-luck supper in the new village hall in Homewood. At least twenty planned on attending.

Committee Chairman.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Louisa Huhnstock who passed away Feb. 24, 1939.
"Tis hard to break the tender cord,
When love has bound the heart,
'Tis hard, so hard to speak the words
We must forever part.Dearest loved one, we have laid thee
In the peaceful grave's embrace,
But thy memory will be cherished
'Till we see thee heavenly face.

NIAGARI GIRLS CLUB
Once again the Niagatri Girls held a pretty bridal shower at the home of Mrs. Dick L. Swisher in honor of Mrs. Richard Roe, (Shirley Anderson) the club's most recent bride. An immense but very realistic looking wedding cake graced the middle of the living room floor, the top being decorated with valley lilies, white tulle and wedding bells.

Piled high around this cake were wrapped packages of various sizes. After the usual salutations and chatter, Shirley was asked to start the pleasant task of untying ribbon bows, reading cards and opening boxes, while the happy group of girls waited eagerly to see what each contained. When the last gift (supposedly) had been opened Shirley was asked to remove the top from the huge cake, which to her surprise she found filled with more gifts.

Games were played and as the evening advanced, the hostess invited the girls into the dining room where she served dainty open faced sandwiches, white cake topped with pink rose buds, candy and coffee. At this time Shirley very graciously thanked Helen for her hospitality and all the members of the club for her lovely gifts, adding that she would be most happy to have them all come and see her. The evening ended when the proud young husband called for his bride and re-affirmed Shirley's thanks and invitation.

Saturday marked the silver wedding anniversaries of two well known Tinley Park families. A group of relatives and friends gathered at the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Keuch and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Marquardt to celebrate the events. Both couples received many gifts and all enjoyed a delightful evening.

"Soul" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, February 18.

The Golden Text was, "I will set my tabernacle among you; and my soul shall not abhor you. And I will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people" (Leviticus 26:11, 12).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "The Lord God is a sun and shield; the Lord will give grace and glory: no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly" (Psalms 84:11).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Soul or Spirit signifies Deity and nothing else. There is no finite soul nor spirit. Soul or Spirit means only one Mind, and cannot be rendered in the plural" (p. 406).

MOTHER OF MRS. CARRIE WALSTON DIES IN INDIANA

Mrs. Sarah E. Shake, aged 85 years, mother of Mrs. Carrie Walston of Orland Park died in her home near Carlisle, Indiana, Feb. 8th.

Those attending the funeral from Orland Park were: Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Walston and son Louis Edwin, Mrs. Frank Liston, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Watt and Mrs. H. A. Erton. The following account of Mrs. Shake's death appeared in the Carlisle News:

Mrs. Sarah E. Shake, 85 years of age, a lifelong resident of the Indian Prairie community east of Carlisle, died at 7:30 o'clock Thursday night of last week at her home, after a two weeks illness of pneumonia. She was the daughter of Cornelius and Naomi Howard and was born in the community in which she died, on December 13, 1854, being 85 years, 2 months and 26 days of age at the time of death.

She is survived by the husband, C. Ed Shake, by a daughter, Mrs. Carrie Walston of Orland Park, Ill., by a son, Orval Shake of Terre Haute, by two grandsons and two grand daughters and by two brothers, Dan V. Howard and Wilton M. Howard, both of California.

Funeral services were held from the Indian Prairie Baptist church, of which the deceased had been a life long member, at two o'clock Sunday afternoon, in charge of Rev. Jack Arnold, pastor of the church. Burial was made in the Indian Prairie cemetery.

Pall bearers were: Dr. C. T. Howard, Mervin Howard, Arthur Watt, Pleasant Shake, Ross Harbaugh and Russell Edds.

Flower girls were: Mrs. Jesse Boone, Mrs. Arthur Watt, Mrs. H. Effie Douthitt and Mrs. Ross Harp. Rogers, Mrs. Flora Grizzle, Miss baugh.

The following obituary was read at the services:

Sarah Ellen Shake, daughter of Naomi Mayfield and Cornelius Howard, was born Nov. 12, 1854 on the Howard homestead just west of the Indian Prairie church. On Feb. 8th, 1940 at the age of 85 years, and 3 months death beached her to turn the last page of her mortal life and quietly passed through the gate from Sunset to Sunrise. In her early girlhood she became a member of the Indian Prairie church and lived her creed through the long years, an example of a true Christian. She was married to Charles Edwin Shake on July 23, 1885 and journeyed hand in hand with this faithful companion for over 54 years.

Besides rearing her own two children, Aunt Sallie as she was lovingly called, mothered several other boys and girls who lived in her home at various times. Her ever-busy hands did the tasks that came to her lot. She was a loving mother, a true friend, a helpful neighbor and a wise counselor as she wended her serene way along the road of everyday living. She needs no flowery tribute for she lived her life in the same community and the sterling quality of her worth is attested by all who knew her. Tho not acclaimed by fame and fortune she was one of the women beyond price who made the world better for having lived therein.

As sunset approached her frail body was wracked with suffering but she bore this without complaint; she could neither walk alone nor see but an inner light sustained her—her mind and memory remained clear and alert until the end.

Seven brothers, Joseph T., James D., William W., Ruel, John, Pierce and Jasper preceded her through the Gateway of Death and Life. She will be missed by all who knew her but those most deeply feeling their loss are the husband, Ed. Shake, the daughter, Carrie Walston of Orland Park, Ill., the son Orval of Terre Haute, the four grandchildren, William Shake, who made his home with his grandparents and was a faithful attendant, Eleanor Liston, Vivian Rudisel and Louis Edwin Walston, all of Orland Park, the two brothers, Wilton M., and Dan Howard, both residents of California, several cousins, nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Louis Walston is expected home this week after spending the past three weeks at Carlisle, Ind., where she was called by the illness of her parents, her mother passing away Feb. 8th. Mrs. Walston remained at Carlisle with her father who is still critically ill.

Zoning Ordinance is Enforced

On January 25, the Appellate Court in session at Ottawa, Illinois, upheld the DuPage County rural zoning ordinance which recently was attacked by the owner of an automobile junk yard on Odgen Avenue just west of Downers Grove. The attempt was made to prevent enforcement of the zoning ordinance with respect to an expansion of the auto wrecking yard beyond the zone in which it was classified, as an industrial use.

The case originally arose in 1937 when Harold P. Duntun, DuPage County Zoning Enforcement Officer ordered Joseph Pollack, the owner, to cease placing junk automobiles on a tract of land adjacent to his existing legal automobile yard. Pollack sued the county zoning officials to restrain the enforcement of the zoning ordinance with respect to this additional land.

Assistant State's Attorney Joel Baker, who handled the case, introduced evidences showing that Pollack had begun to dump wrecked cars on the property adjacent long before he had any title to the property and in violation of the zoning ordinance; of the added danger to traffic on Odgen Avenue by the addition of more entrances and exits onto this main highway from such an auto wrecking yard; that the assessed values of the property in the vicinity were definitely lower because of the automobile junk yard use.

In July, 1938, the Circuit Court upheld the county in its administration of the zoning ordinance. Pollack appealed to the Supreme Court of the State. The Supreme Court transferred the case to the Appellate Court, second district at Ottawa which, after due consideration denied the injunction against the county and affirmed the decree of the Circuit Court in the following words: "No evidence appears in support of the allegation, that the ordinance was unreasonable, arbitrary and oppressive. The decree is therefore affirmed."

This is the first court decision on any of the county zoning ordinances now in effect in the Region of Chicago or in Illinois. The favorable opinion of the court marks an important step in the progress of the several counties toward protecting property values in an orderly process in the unincorporated sections of a county.

At Home On The Range

This pose may be slightly unconventional, but the Frigidaire electric range also is somewhat unconventional because its makers report it is not just another "standard" range. This model has two complete ovens, operates with time control switches, cooks meals while the homemaker goes to the movies, can't overheat, won't overcook, and is as easy to operate as a home radio. Being entirely electric, it is clean and fast; and this new model is surprisingly economical with current. It was developed by the makers of the Frigidaire electric refrigerator.

THE NEWEST LIGHT SOURCE

Fluorescent Lamps

...what they are...how they work

The idea of a Fluorescent light source has long been in the minds of scientists. Centuries ago, it was first discovered that many hundreds of rocks, chemicals, organic and inorganic substances have the property of becoming luminous, or fluorescent, when exposed to certain radiation. From the continued study of this phenomenon has come the development and refinement of what is now known as Fluorescent lighting.

Fluorescent lamps, made possible by these discoveries, are amazing new sources of light. They are slim glass tubes, giving off richly glowing illumination like daylight or in abundant color. They do not contain filaments like ordinary bulbs and tubular lamps. Light is produced through the agency of invisible radiation acting on fluorescent powders with which the inside of the tube is coated. This radiation is created by the flow of electricity through mercury vapor generated in the glass tube. The fluorescent powders are highly efficient converters of this radiation into light.

In the short time since their introduction, smart restaurants, stores, shops, night clubs, businesses and industries of many kinds have adopted the use of Fluorescent lamps to striking advantage. Visitors at the San Francisco and New York World Fairs marvelled at the colored lighting effects obtained with new type lighting. What has caused this sudden interest in and acceptance of Fluorescent lighting? Novelty, for one thing. Fluorescent lighting is new, different, unique—so distinctive that interest in this new lighting method has increased a hundredfold in two short years.

But novelty is not all. The quick success of the Fluorescent lamp is largely due to certain unique advantages which have led to many installations in streamlined and "plus" lighting.

Its size and shape allow freedom for creative design. The small cross section of the lamp is convenient for recessed lighting and modern fixtures, and by combining Fluorescent lamps in various sizes and color selections, many interesting applications are possible.

The highly efficient generation of strong and pure colored light is one of the Fluorescent lamp's outstanding advantages. Lamps are available to produce daylight, white, gold, blue, green, pink and red. The daylight lamp emits light giving a cool, bright effect that shows colors in their outdoor appearance.

Other advantages are inherent in the Fluorescent lamp. It permits higher lighting intensities with existing wiring when used with proper auxiliary equipment. The surface temperature of the Fluorescent lamp is so low it can be touched without discomfort. Because light is emitted quite uniformly from the entire length and surface of the tube, glare is reduced and Fluorescent lamps are therefore often useful for exposed lamp applications.

Fluorescent lamps for stores, shops, theatres, restaurants, offices and businesses of many kinds are offered in a variety of sizes including 48 inch (40-watt) 36 inch (30-watt), 24 inch (20-watt), and 18 inch (15-watt). And although no equipment is as yet widely available for homes, special installations of Fluorescent lamps are proving highly satisfactory.

We are frequently asked about the comparative economy of Fluorescent lighting. Cost of lighting with Fluorescent lamps as with Incandescent bulbs is made up of the following items: cost of electricity, cost of lamp renewals, maintenance, and interest and depreciation on the investment in fixtures and equipment. In the case of Fluorescent lamps, there is certain auxiliary equipment necessary for their operation. All these factors must be weighed along with the recognized values of lighting results. Good lighting, whether Fluorescent or Incandescent, doesn't come ready-made. Good lighting must be tailored to fit the job. That is why it is impossible to make any definite statement about the relative costs of Fluorescent versus Incandescent lighting without a complete knowledge of individual situations. In some cases the cost may be higher, in others lower.

Is Fluorescent lighting practical for your business? What equipment shall you select? What about installation costs? The answers to these and many other related questions are available to you without charge or obligation through the services of our lighting specialists. These men are thoroughly familiar with Fluorescent lighting and other types as well. They have no equipment to sell, but they will be glad to give you the benefit of their experience. We invite you to use this service.

MOKENA

Sunday afternoon Miss Mariette Rahm entertained in her home in Frankfort at a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Florence Hauck of Mokena and her approaching marriage to Mr. Lester Christiansen of Frankfort, which took place Wednesday. Airplane bunco was played at four tables with prizes awarded to Mrs. August Hauck, Mrs. Clarence Lauffer and Miss Hauck, who in turn presented them to the honored guest. Refreshments were served at quartet tables, the one where the honored guest was seated, was decorated in blue and pink and centered with a miniature bride and groom. Many lovely and beautiful gifts were showered upon the bride-to-be.

The teachers and officers of St. John's Evangelical Sunday school tendered a party to Miss Hauck in the church basement Tuesday evening. Miss Hauck has been a teacher in this Sunday school for several years. Bunco was played and refreshments were served. An occasional chair was presented to Miss Hauck from this group. Another miscellaneous shower will be given Saturday afternoon in the home of Miss Adeline Semmler honoring this bride, by a group of young ladies who formerly played pinochle together.

Mokena Scout News

The weekly meeting of the Mokena Boy Scouts was brought to order by Assistant Scoutmaster Irvin Howe. Bob Homering then led the boys in the scout oath. The roll call was taken and two visitors were present. The boys were then given some lessons in drilling, after which a few games were played and the meeting was closed with the benediction.

MOKENA SCHOOL NEWS

High School

On February 9 the high school room gave an assembly for the school. One of the main features was a play with all girl characters, "Polly Put the Kettle on." The following cast was selected after everyone who was interested had tried out: Mrs. Jason, Roberta Bickley; Kay Jason, Ruth Lowe; Marion Jason, Charlotte Gorney; Polly Lincoln Washington, Hyacinth Rinke; Julia Martin, Betty Stark; Mrs. Vail, Catharine Reid; Sylvia Vail, La Verne Gunhouse. Lillian Hellmuth was chosen for the part of Mrs. Vail originally but she was taken ill. Congratulations, Catharine, for stepping into the part so well. Those who helped with properties were Lucille Janssen and Eleanor Hostert while those who helped with the staging were Gordon Clevenger, Nicholas Heiman, Robert Homering and Bill Mutsch. Musical selections were offered by Richard and Kenneth Benson who played "Roll Out the Barrel" and a German folk song.

The attendance for the first month of this semester was 88.4 per cent, with 6 tardy.

Intermediate Room

The sixth grade boys have made an attractive log cabin of chalk on the blackboard to carry out the spirit of February holidays. The girls of the sixth grade showed their talent by decorating the valentine box for the party last Wednesday.

At the valentine party prizes were won by Dora Jean Stark, Willis Shiek, Donald Lee Homering, and Doris Mae Homering.

The bulletin board this week is featuring a display of airplanes which have been brought in by fourth graders in conjunction with their work.

This month's attendance amounted to 88.96 per cent while there were no tardy cases.

Junior High School

Marry Ann Rinke, Joyce Beagley of Orland Park, and Mrs. Glenn Schroeder were pleasant callers in the Junior High School room last week.

Some of the 8th grade boys made a fine poster of "George Washington Valley Forge."

Will County Named for WLS "Salute of Honor"

Will county has been selected for the Salute of Honor on the Prairie Farmer-WLS Home Talent portion of the WLS National Barn Dance on Saturday, February 24th, 7 to 7:30 p. m. Four entertainment acts from Will county and Louis F. Bottino, county superintendent of schools, will participate in the broadcast.

The acts to be heard are the local Yokels, Three Keys, Betty Haake and Jack Magnuson. All have participated in Prairie Farmer-WLS Home Talent programs sponsored by local organizations in Will county.

Patsy Montana, modeling cowgirl of the regular WLS staff, will be guest of the home talent entertainers on their program. She will be the only regular WLS entertainer on the show.

The Local Yokels are a four-piece novelty instrumental group from Joliet; Henry Sahler, John Fitzer, Everett Seil and Robert Schiek. Sahler plays rope, cane and a five-gallon can bass instrument; Fitzer plays clarinet; Seil the guitar; and Schiek plays the slide whistle and "erptwiddle", a conglomeration of washboard, whistles, horns, bells and whatnot.

The Three Keys, also from Joliet, are Ann and Arnold McPhee and Stuart Cooper. These ballad singers will be making their second appearance on the WLS National Barn Dance, and have also sung on two other WLS home talent programs Saturday afternoons.

Betty Haake, 1221 E. Cass street, Joliet, singer of popular songs, first appeared on WLS during the afternoon home talent program only last month.

John Magnuson, the fourth Will county act, is from Mundelein and is now attending Eureka college at Eureka, Illinois. He is studying voice and working toward a degree in music.

Louis F. Bottino, county superintendent of schools, will represent the county at large, telling about the business, civic and farming interests in Will county. Mr. Bottino, who holds degrees from Beloit college and Columbia university, served as principal and coach of Reed-Custer township high school at Braidwood, Illinois, before being elected county superintendent in 1938 and moving to Joliet.

Speaking for Prairie Farmer and Community Service will be Arthur C. Page, associate editor and also farm program director of WLS, and Phil Kalar, manager of Community Service.

The new series of home talent programs as part of the regular WLS National Barn Dance are in addition to the regular home talent broadcasts on Saturday afternoons at one o'clock. One guest act will be chosen from the afternoon program to join the Will county group in their program Saturday night.

Both the afternoon and evening home talent shows are presented by Prairie Farmer-WLS Community Service, Inc., which directs the staging of home talent barn dance shows in co-operation with local civic organizations.

On this new program, some community is selected each Saturday night for the Salute of Honor and as many of the entertainers as possible are selected from that county, with one act from the regular WLS staff as guests of the amateurs.

LOOKING AHEAD

Republican candidates have more than two months before they must face their electorate at the primaries, but farseeing GOP supporters are already stressing the extreme importance of naming nominees who can be elected in November.

Next in importance to asking for a Republican ballot is checking the strongest men on that ballot, and it should be the duty of every Republican, between now and April 9, to compare the election potentialities of each candidate. With conditions in the county more favorable than they have been in years, it is absolutely necessary that only those with acknowledged strength enter the lists.

The question, of course, is how to recognize these men with the qualities necessary to bring Will county back into the Republican fold. What virtues must they possess to capture the support of a majority of the voters?

News from all over the county indicates that Paul V. Wunder is finding favor in his race for Clerk of the Circuit Court nomination. Because of this fact, Mr. Wunder affords an excellent opportunity to illustrate the qualities needed in the campaign.

Although comparatively young, Mr. Wunder has labored long and faithfully in the Republican ranks.

Mr. Wunder is definitely progressive and a great favorite with the younger Republicans, but he tempers all his opinions with a mature judgment which finds favor with old and young alike. On the platform Mr. Wunder is sure of his facts and presents them brilliantly, but his talks never give the impression of glibness. Above all, he is completely natural, human and sincere.

To complete the picture it might be well to add that Mr. Wunder has a background of integrity and honesty. His father, the late Paul V. Wunder, was one of the most respected men ever to serve in public office, while his grandfather the late L. H. Mottinger, served Will county as sheriff from 1898 to 1902 with great distinction.

In presenting this sketch of Mr. Wunder we believe we are presenting a composite picture of the type of man which the Republicans have indicated they want to nominate. This is the type of man who can be elected.

Study of Kitchen Convenience Opens in Will County

Kitchen convenience can be gotten largely by studying the problem and not spending much money, maintained Miss Gladys Ward, home management specialist, college of agriculture, University of Illinois, in meeting with two leaders from each of the Will County Home Bureau units at Joliet last Wednesday. These leaders will in turn present the lesson to their own groups during February and March.

Having watched homemakers rearrange their workshops successfully, Miss Ward pointed out poor grouping of furniture and equipment and lack of storage space are usually main difficulties. Importance of having a well arranged workshop is shown in the fact that most women spent at least 70 per cent of their time in the kitchen.

To be physically convenient, a kitchen should come up to standard on six points, the specialist said. It should have adequate heat for cooking purposes and for physical comfort in cold weather. The water supply should be conveniently located within the work center. There should be good ventilation with some degree of coolness in the summer through natural or artificial means, and adequate lighting from natural and artificial sources. Along with these factors, there should be a sanitary and adequate work table, separate from the dining table if possible, and convenient storage arrangements, including cold storage of foods.

Grouped near each other in the working center of the kitchen should be the range, refrigerator, sink and drain boards and work table, with food supplies, small equipment and utensils nearby.

Many homes are old and for that reason the kitchen may be inconvenient in size or in wall space, Miss Ward said. Usually these faults can be righted if some thought is given to the problem.

FARMERS WARNED TO BE PREPARED FOR CINCH BUGS

There are more cinch bugs hibernating this winter than in the history of the state, with the exception of 1933, according to W. P. Flint, chief entomologist of the agricultural experiment station of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, and the State Natural History Survey.

"However," says the entomologist, "the chances are about only 1 to 2 that the bugs will cause damage next season. Regardless of what we might expect, this is the time of year to begin planning to combat them next spring in case they do threaten to do great damage to our crops."

"The best way to be ready for them is to have the largest number of non-susceptible crops possible this year, arranging corn so it does not adjoin small grains, whenever this can be done, and to use resistant varieties of corn. There are a number of these resistant varieties which have been quite thoroughly tested, and limited quantities may be obtained from most of the larger breeders of hybrid corn."

Soybeans is one crop that is being grown in abundance that furnishes good hay for dairy cows and can be depended upon as free from cinch bugs. Therefore, we suggest that the average dairyman be careful about his corn crop and keep it away from grass road sides and plant a good acreage of soybeans just in case the bugs do happen to be bad. Cinch bugs have a habit of appearing every so many years and it has been a number of years now since they have been in this territory, but the time cannot be very far in the distance when bugs will reappear.

Arouse Ye Christian Men And Women

Nineteen hundred years ago there appeared on the world's horizon a lone man. He came preaching a new doctrine—a doctrine which was in direct contradiction to the political and religious idealogists of the age in which He lived. A young Jewish lawyer had the temerity to ask Him "Which is the great Commandment of the law?" Jesus of Nazareth answered by saying, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul and with all thy mind. This is the first and Great Commandment. And the second is like unto it. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

The teachings of Jesus of Nazareth changed the old order of the world, and are responsible for the Christian civilization which we of the twentieth century enjoy.

Today powerful forces are seeking to overthrow the Christian religion and to destroy the civilization which has given so much to the peoples of the earth in the last nineteen hundred years.

The alarm of the hour is, shall Christianity continue to dominate the civilized world, or will it be destroyed by those powerful agencies which are today seeking to rule the world by force? Are we to return to the dark ages when might was the only rule of right?

Arouse ye men and women of the Christian faith. Attend and support your churches. Send your children to Sunday Schools and see that they are properly instructed in the principles of Christian belief. We must all strive to better understand the things for which Jesus of Nazareth contended, so that your faith may be stimulated and your energies enlisted in combat against those evil forces which are today seeking to destroy the Christian religion and overthrow our present civilization.

R. L. Spreitzer In G.O.P. Contest For Recorder

Robert L. Spreitzer, 28 years old, of 613 Plainfield Avenue in Joliet, has officially announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Recorder of Deeds.

Mr. Spreitzer was educated in the Joliet parochial schools and was graduated from St. Viator College in 1934.

He has been active in Young Republican circles for many years and has served several terms as precinct committeeman for the Ninth Joliet election district. The son of John L.

Spreitzer, he comes of an old and respected German family name in Will County.

In making his first bid for public office, Mr. Spreitzer declared "I am presenting my name to the voters with the sincere belief that I am fully qualified to serve. My only promise is to give honest and efficient service, and I shall remain consistent with that promise."

Fortitude Conquers

Valley Forge—the darkest days of the Revolution—a whole nation's Liberty at stake—a time when hopes seemed dead. Many a mind faltered. Many a pair of hands went up in despair.

But, fortunately, there was one heart that never "gave up". One heart that saw the silver lining to the clouds. One heart that prayed. One heart that gathered others to its standard and in that unity, drove on to victory!

'Twas the heart of—
GEORGE WASHINGTON!

Here is a quotation from Washington's Farewell Address which it is worth the most sober thought of every good, loyal American in the present troubled times of the world:

"Interwoven as is the love of liberty with every ligament of your hearts, no recommendation of mine is necessary to fortify or confirm the attachment."

The Tribune "Razzes" Wilson

The following editorial appeared in the Chicago Tribune Saturday, February 10 on ex-judge Edwin L. Wilson of Will county, who is again seeking public office after being beaten for re-election in the June judicial election last year:

Wilson Isn't Bashful
Edwin L. Wilson, the former paladin of the Will county slot machine racket apparently credits voters with extremely short memories. Only last June he was defeated for reelection as judge in the 12th circuit, but he is now back in the lists seeking the Democratic nomination for state's attorney of Will county.

His injunctions restrained local officials from enforcing the law against slot machine racketeers. He escaped impeachment action by only two votes in the legislature. During debate on the proposal the legislature was told that he had been a pallbearer for Lawrence (Butch) Crowley, the Chicago gangster who moved to Joliet and prospered in the racket until rivals liquidated him with a shotgun.

The voters, on this record, which included such other items as an illegal use of his judicial power in an attempt to save a swindler from prison, found Wilson unfit for judicial office. It is unlikely that they will have changed their minds since last June, but Wilson's boldness is easily explainable.

Following the judicial election, the Will county grand jury indicted 17 persons, including a brother of the judge's bailiff, for election frauds. The frauds were allegedly committed for the benefit of Wilson. As state's attorney he would be in a position to save his henchmen from jail. He would also be able to stifle the investigation which the present state's attorney, James E. Burke, is conducting into the extortion practiced on state civil service employees by the Illinoisans, Gov. Horner's 2 per cent shakedown club. Mr. Wilson could find a reason for taking a chance.

The Democratic party in Will county apparently is running out of good candidate material when they offer a candidate like Wilson.

BILL CORUM—famed sports writer and columnist

COMMON SENSE and years of smoking experience have told Bill Corum what scientists have confirmed in their research laboratories—that the slower a cigarette burns, the cooler and milder the smoking. Some cigarettes burn fast, some slower, some just in between. Laboratory tests show Camels are definitely slower-burning (details below). Turn to Camels and get the extras in smoking pleasure—extra mildness, extra coolness, extra flavor, and extra smoking. Or, as Bill Corum puts it: "More pleasure per puff and more puffs per pack!"

In recent laboratory tests, CAMELS burned 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them. That means, on the average, a smoking plus equal to

Smart Sports Frock With Useful Pockets

POCKET frocks are very smart, especially sports and resort types like this (1889-B), which gives pointed importance to the pockets that Paris is newly sponsoring as both decorative and useful. This charming design is really everything you want in a new dress for sports and daytime. It's young and casual. It buttons down the front so that it's easy to put on. The wide, inset belt and the shoulder portions, cut in one with the sleeves, make it flattering to the figure.

You'll greatly enjoy adding this frock to your midwinter wardrobe right now—in bright wool or flat crepe, if you're staying on the job, in pastel silk or cotton if you're flitting South.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1889-B is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 14 (32) requires, with short sleeves, 3½ yards of 39-inch material; with long sleeves, 4 yards. For a pattern of this attractive model send 15 cents in coins, your name, address, style, number and size to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1324, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill.

Mental Laws

Poverty, ill health, discord, failure to realize our ideals, discontent, unhappiness, all our ills, spring largely from our ignorance of the working of mental laws, our failure to realize the overwhelming influence thought exercises in our lives.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to loosen germ-laden phlegm, increase secretion and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. No matter how many medicines you have tried, tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding that you are to like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

DOAN'S PILLS

There Were Two Irishmen—

By J. Y. BARBER

(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

SEUMAS GAVAN was Number One man and the only Irishman in the fourth ward—and there wasn't the whisper of a doubt about that. On Monday he lamented the need of hiring a dago to tend bar for him in his South street speakeasy, but by Saturday he was glad of it. Irishmen aren't temperamentally suited for co-operative occupations; they won't do as they're told. He was glad his blue-eyed Kathleen never argued with her father.

"Way back in the ancestry there may have been some weak strain that accounted for her passivity. It made Seumas more conscious than ever that he was the only Irishman in the ward. The only man of intellect and discernment, he'd almost say, except for that scavenger of the streets, Adolphus Gonwerv, whose insufferable exposes appeared now and again between the scrofulous lines of the local paper.

"Twas a black day indeed when Kathleen met Adolphus Gonwerv in the bar where Kathleen had no business at all. And a curse on the day when she came to her kind old father, him that was nearly killed with worry over trying to get a respectable liquor license, to ask his good will to their marriage.

"He's not the man," Seumas said abruptly.

"How, not the man?" Kathleen said, too quietly even for her.

"He's the sort," said Seumas, "who writes about people that have died of murder. And it's insulting, he is, when he blackguards some worthy citizen in public life."

Seumas knew he would have no trouble with gentle Kathleen.

She would not, she said, let him alone. "She said why she wouldn't and it took her five minutes to say it.

"Bu-but, he's a drinking man, he is," Seumas said with appeal. "He drinks like a fish and he be no good at all."

"Aye," said Kathleen, "and that coming from you! May God have mercy on your soul for the narrowness of your heart. You've little to do to speak of that when it's your own grog he drinks. And it isn't true that he's no good. He's the best newspaper man in the town. And I like him. I love him!"

The debate had reached a point where Seumas realized he would have to assert himself. He leaned forward in his chair. He hissed softly. "I could break him. You know my power when I want to use it. Frame him! How would you like that?"

But Kathleen never moved. She looked at her father boldly. "Aye," she said. "Well, two can play at that game—if it's a fight you're looking for!" And with that she ran out of the room and out of the house and he didn't see her for days. The shame of it!

"I want to see her just t-y and marry that spalpeen," Seumas said to himself all day on Friday. Customers heard him as he whispered under his breath. They thought he was reciting the list of witnesses who would appear when he came up for his license hearing on the morrow and they let him concentrate.

But Seumas had forgotten all about the hearing until his attorney came down and took him to court. His reception there lulled him to contentment. Mr. Gavan was well thought of up town in certain circles. Not for long, however, did he smile benignly this way and that. His bright green eyes froze to the witness box. For there in the middle of everything sat Adolphus Gonwerv.

Not being familiar with the expediences of the newspaper business Seumas didn't know that Adolphus had merely wandered in there in the course of his routine and that in ten minutes he would be discovered by a court attache and thrown out on his neck. Seumas' pain was so great that he beat himself upon the chest. Could Kathleen have been so angry then to put this notorious exposé onto him?

"I'm going home," he said to his attorney. "I'm sick now. No, I don't care about the license; to hell with it." And so Mr. Gavan went home feeling the power ooze out of him with every step of the way.

Evening came to Seumas Gavan in the little office that he maintained upstairs. He sat sullenly beside the speaking tube that connected his office with the bar and he wished that he had anticipated Kathleen being at least half an Irishman. That was bitter, bitter! It made him very sorry. So absorbed was he that he failed to hear the buzzer until its third buzz.

The bartender's voice floated dimly to him through the tube:

"Kathleen's come home!"

"Aye," Seumas said noncommittally. He was abruptly the old Seumas and he had the look of a hawk over a calf. It would be now! and he would be brief but annihilating. The bartender took up a familiar refrain:

"Adolphus Gonwerv wants to know if he's good for your daughter—and he wants to congratulate you on getting your license today, sir!" It was incredible!

"Ha—have I got it?"

"You have!"

"He is!!!"

PLAN REFRESHMENTS TO SUIT THE SEASON

See Recipes Below.

When You Serve a Crowd

Whether it's your responsibility to provide unusual eats for the Senior skating party, or an inexpensive menu for the church supper, cooking in quantities does present problems!

Unless you have recipes designed to serve large numbers, it's safer to make quick breads, cakes and cookies, according to standard family size recipes, doubling them, perhaps, but no more. Proportions of ingredients change as recipes become larger, and it's no simple matter for an amateur to guess at them.

Plan refreshments to suit the season and your guests. When equipment is makeshift, the help limited, and the number to be served is large, select foods that are easily prepared and served, and foods that won't be hurt by standing.

For the simplest sort of refreshments after skating or skiing, hot spiced tea is ideal.

Clam chowder, with toasted crackers, makes a hearty, satisfying and substantial dish to serve after a sleigh ride in the frosty air. Spaghetti or macaroni make inexpensive, mainstay dishes for a church supper or midwinter meeting of the P. T. A. Served with a crisp salad, hard rolls and fresh fruit for dessert, Italian spaghetti makes an unusual and easy-to-serve meal.

You'll find the tested recipes below practical when you entertain a crowd, and if you're planning a smaller party, my booklet entitled "Easy Entertaining" will give you suggestions for menus and recipes, too.

THE RADIO AND EDUCATION

Homework by radio is the latest in education. We may presently hear of the little boy who got "E" in radio.

A child's education may ultimately depend on good reception and whether there was much static in his formative years.

"Little Nell was cut out to be bright," some fond parent may explain in days to come, "but her outside aerial fell down at a crucial period in her education."

It has remained for the New York city board of education to introduce homework by radio. Teachers discuss subjects over the air 15 minutes at night, and the pupils report the next morning. Little Willie's excuse, "But, teacher, popper was using our set to get Bennie Goodman" will presumably not be acceptable.

We can imagine the conversation between mommer and her boy in many a home:

Mother—Now, Milton, don't you want to listen to the radio now?

Milton—No.

Mother—But your homework is on the air.

Milton—That's why I don't wanna listen to the radio!

Mother—If you don't listen to the radio you'll grow up and be ignorant, and what happens to boys who grow up ignorant?

Milton—They get radio jobs at $5,000 a night.

Mother—It's a wonderful thing to get school work over the radio.

Milton—What's wonderful about it?

Mother—Everything. When I was a little girl I had no radio to listen to and get my homework.

Milton—Those were the days!

Mother—Think of it! Just sitting in a chair by a radio and having your teacher come to you by air.

Milton—I get enough of her in school. Besides, it's not so easy. Last night I had an important lesson and I got my teacher, two shipwrecks, a mystery drama, a British war and the United States marine band all at the same time.

Mother—Milton, no more nonsense. Tune in and do your homework.

Milton—Okay, mom, but if I grow up stupid you'll know this was a lousy radio set.
